The Lost Generation was writers who left the USA because they got sick of the American society. They would then move to Europe. The writer F. Scott Fitzgerald was one of the writers that left for Europe. He was originally an American writer.

F. Scott Fitzgerald was born in 1896 in St. Paul, Minnesota. He wrote his first novel in 1920, which was called "This Side of Paradise". He would not get his last novel published because he died before he could finish it. The last novel was called "The Last Tycoon".
