PROHIBITION

In the 1920's the u.s goverment band the sale of alcohol with the 18th amendment. The americans were angry about it so people called bootleggers would sell alcohol to the citizens.

The U.S would soon see speakeasies. Speakeasies are bars that are illegal. They popped up after the 18th amendment was passed. In urban areas people did not obey the law so they put more speakeasies there.

Speakeasies were very popular during prohibition. People would come there to get their alcohol since the government banned it. This would help bootleggers make money when the law was put into action. Americans would have to go to these places to get their drink.
